New Beginnings

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear friends,

In his 1989 book entitled Among Schoolchildren, Tracy Kidder writes: “Good teachers put snags in the river of children passing by, and over the years, they redirect hundreds of lives. Many people find it easy to imagine unseen webs of malevolent conspiracy in the world, and they are not always wrong. But there is also an innocence that conspires to hold humanity together, and it is made of people who can never fully know the good that they have done.”

During my first year as president of Hebrew College, I have had the privilege and joy of witnessing the acts of generosity of countless people “who can never fully know the good that they have done.”

The dedicated teachers in our graduate leadership programs, who rigorously and lovingly prepare our rabbis, cantors, and educators to serve communities throughout the country and around the globe with wisdom, compassion, and courage.

The diverse teachers in our community programs, who ignite and inspire a love of Torah and Jewish life and an open-hearted engagement with the wider world in learners at every age and stage.

The devoted volunteers who have stepped up to serve — on our Board of Trustees, Strategic Planning Committee, Real Estate Search Committee, Presidential Installation Committee, Hebrew College Live Spring Fundraiser and Storytelling Event Committee, Centennial Planning Committee — and in countless other ways. I am proud to be associated with an institution whose leaders embody such intelligence, integrity, kindness, and commitment.

The talented professional staff throughout the College, who work tirelessly to ensure the quality, vitality, responsibility, and sustainability of all of our programs.

The profoundly generous individuals and foundations in Greater Boston and around the country, who are inspired by the work we are doing and have come together with renewed energy and focus to give over 4.5 million dollars as partners in our educational mission to create a more vibrant and purposeful Jewish community and a world of dignity for all.

Our daily morning liturgy includes the recitation of a list of sacred obligations that are described in the Mishnah as “the things for which there is no measure.” Included on the list are deeds of loving kindness and the study of Torah.

In this age of metrics, when we are rightly called upon to track and measure our achievements, it is also good to be reminded that there are “things for which there is no measure.” Beyond metrics, there is the mystery of our interconnectedness and the unseen ripples of the good we have done.

Thanks to each and every one of you for your commitment and trust, and for the part you have played in our journey this year. Thank you again to our committed donors and volunteers for making all that we do possible. I look forward with tremendous excitement to the sweet fruits of our collaboration in the coming year.

RABBI SHARON COHEN ANISFELD
President, Hebrew College

PUBLIC CONFERENCE ON THE FUTURE OF THE SYNAGOGUE

The Rabbinical School of Hebrew College held a day-long conference, "The Past and Future of Synagogues," on Monday, January 28, 2019. The conference, which was open to the public, featured academics, rabbis, and community leaders from around the country examining how synagogues are transforming, given demographic changes within the American Jewish Community.

"Many synagogues are in trouble," said Rabbi Dan Judson, Rabbinical School Dean. "Membership has dropped and they are struggling financially. But there are also a lot of exciting stories about new and emergent Jewish communities. We've brought together thought-leaders and practitioners from some of the most innovative synagogues in America to reflect on the issues facing congregations today."

SESSION HIGHLIGHTS INCLUDED:

Jonathan Sarna, Joseph H. & Belle R. Braun Professor of American Jewish History at Brandeis University, kicked off the day with a talk on "Lessons from Synagogues Past to Help Synagogues Future."

Rabbi Lizzi Heydmann, spiritual leader at Mishkan Chicago, discussed how she created a new vibrant synagogue in Chicago.

Rabbis Jessica Kate Meyer, Rab`14, Rabbi/Chazzan at The Kitchen in San Francisco, and David Fainsilber, Rab`14, spiritual leader of the Jewish Community of Stowe in Stowe, VT, spoke with Lex Rofeberg, IFJE Cert`18, co-host of the popular Jewish podcast, "Judaism Unbound", discussing the role of music in transforming synagogues.

Yusufi Vali, executive director of The Islamic Society of Boston Cultural Center Mosque in Roxbury, and Rev. Bill Burke, pastor of Grace Church in Lexington, discussed what synagogues can learn from churches and mosques.

This year, the College, awarded degrees and certificates to 128 graduates who completed their studies in our Prozdor Community High School Program, our Me'ah Adult Learning Program, and our graduate leadership programs for rabbis, cantors, and educators. In the afternoon, our rabbinic and cantorial graduates received semikha at special ordination ceremonies at Temple Reyim in Newton, MA.

ANI KINOR: VISIONS OF PRAYER LEADERSHIP

More than 30 students from around Boston and across the United States came to Hebrew College in June for "Visions of Prayer Leadership," a new two-day intensive prayer leader seminar that kicked off Ani Kinor, Hebrew College's eight-week Prayer Leader Summer Institute, which included daily, weekly, and multi-week courses in leading services and teaching music.

"Ani Kinor was a chance to learn with the best. The topic, prayer leadership, was a special incentive. The learning was in an atmosphere of warmth and humor underlain by serious spiritual seeking. And you don't have to be an expert yourself to benefit from a course like this. We in the Boston community are fortunate to have Hebrew College in our midst." — Naomi Myrvaagnes, who is also participating in Hebrew College's Me'ah Classic program

Impact Stories

HEBREW COLLEGE RECEIVES THREE TRANSFORMATIVE GRANTS

Hebrew College was awarded three significant new grants from notable foundations, each providing meaningful multi-year support:

*The Arthur
Vining Davis
Foundations*

Germanacos Foundation

The Arthur Vining Davis Foundations (AVDF) awarded Hebrew College's Betty Ann Greenbaum Miller Center for Interreligious Learning & Leadership a three-year, $250,000 grant to develop and expand the Boston Interfaith Leadership Initiative (BILL), a fellowship program that teaches undergraduate students from nine Boston-area colleges to serve as effective interreligious leaders on their campuses and in the broader community.

The Chleck Family Foundation established the Chleck Family Scholarship Program at Hebrew College with a three-year, $300,000 gift. The grant provides generous and vitally important scholarship support for rabbinical students at Hebrew College.

The Germanacos Foundation has made a grant of $350,000 over four years to support a new vision for our Year-in-Israel program for rabbinical students. The program, called Balevav, includes special courses, seminars, and shabbatonim, and focuses on enabling students to develop relationships with Israeli mentors, teachers, and peers, foster personal connections with vibrant Israeli communities and organizations, and engage more deeply with the rich complexity and creativity of contemporary Israeli society.

ALL GENDERS WRAP

After discovering that all videos about how to put on tefillin portrayed only men, rabbinical student Rachel Putterman set out to empower Jews of all genders with the knowledge of this sacred practice, making Judaism accessible through "All Genders Wrap," a video project.

"People are impressed with the diversity represented in the videos, as well as their beauty and clarity, and are telling us how valuable they are to the communities they serve. It's incredibly satisfying to have the videos out in the world where they can inspire and teach people how to engage in this holy practice." - Rachel Putterman, rabbinical student

JEWISH LEARNING & SOCIAL ACTION

Hebrew College is bringing Jewish learning and social justice to the Boston community through the College's new Open Circle Social Action courses. Open Circle Social Action, one of our Community Learning offerings, reflects the College's enduring commitment to areivut (communal responsibility) as a core value — where Jewish learning is seen not only as an academic endeavor, but as a process that invites students to ask and wrestle with questions of meaning, purpose, and personal responsibility.

"Judaism asks us to imagine, and even remember what it was like to be slaves and to experience freedom. That foundational experience of liberation is something that we return to every day in our liturgy, and every year, most notably on Passover," said Rabbi Daniel Schaefer, Rab'18, who co-taught the Open Circle Social Action class Organizing and Resilience: A Workshop for Jewish Urban Educators. "For us to talk about liberation, without working towards it for all people, would make the words and holidays ring hollow for me. By working for social change, I'm not only doing what I can to help others, but breathing new life into the central stories and teachings of Judaism."

INNOVATING FOR THE FUTURE

In May 2018, Hebrew College announced the launch of the new Hebrew College Innovation Lab and named Rabbi Jeff Summit, Emeritus Neubauer Executive Director of Tufts Hillel and a research professor in the Tufts Department of Music and Judaic Studies, to the College faculty and as the Lab's first director.

The Innovation Lab, which launched in September 2019, supports the design and implementation of new student and alumni community-building projects in Greater Boston, ranging from empowering Jewish activists to designing a new minyan to creating more community-wide celebrations, through seed grants ranging from $2,500 to $5,000. An out-of-the-box thinker, Rabbi Summit leads a group seminar on Wednesday afternoons for participants, and provides one-on-one mentorship and supervision.

"Over the years, I've been paying attention to the ways that Hebrew College has emerged as a hub for innovation and a true pluralistic institution in Jewish life in the United States," said Rabbi Summit. "I've been moved and impressed by the quality of leadership and the outstanding students at Hebrew College. When President Sharon Cohen Anisfeld came to me with this idea, I jumped on the opportunity. I am deeply excited about this project."

#INSTADRASH

Hebrew College students are making Judaism accessible through Instagram. Each week Rabbi Hayley Goldstein, Rab` 19 writes a short drash in collaboration with her partner, artist Lizzie Sivitz, who illuminates Hayley's words with her hand-done artwork: The result is a collaborative #instadrash called Nireh Or (@nireh_Or).

"My Hebrew College teachers saw how bringing our own creativity to the text helps us find our own Torah. This is something so unique about Hebrew College, and, honestly, it's the reason why I chose to study there!" - Rabbi Hayley Goldstein, Rab` 19, Rabbi at Cornell University Hillel

NAVIGATING GRANDPARENTING THROUGH A JEWISH LENS

Hebrew College's new Community Learning series "Grandparenting Through a Jewish Lens" teaches grandparents how Jewish wisdom can help them navigate their role in their children's and grandchildren's lives. The four-part course, which launched in 2018, addresses questions such as: "How do we maintain good relationships with our children and grandchildren and not let our differences divide us?" "How are we shaped by our relationships with our own parents and grandparents?" And "how do we transmit our values to our grandchildren?"

"I've had a lot of fun sharing experiences and strategies about being a Jewish grandparent. We do have a good group and the fact that we've all known each other for decades makes the intimacy of sharing all the more meaningful." - Arthur Walitt, Grandparenting Through a Jewish Lens participant

NURTURING TEEN PHILANTHROPY

Hebrew College's Jewish Teen Foundation of Greater Boston (JTFGB), a four-year-old program which teaches local high school students about fundraising, civic leadership and grant-making, awarded $60,265 in grant funding raised by 61 teen leaders to eight organizations that support immigration rights, fight climate change, and combat child abuse and trafficking. This year's group included high school students from 16 communities from Boston to Worcester. Since the program launched in 2015, teens have donated $146,000 to various organizations that help fight sexual assault, substance abuse, and promote mental health, amongst other issues.

"We're basically helping to create the next generation of Jewish philanthropists. It's a wonderful way for the community to see the impact of these teens, both in the Jewish community and beyond." - Leslie Pucker, co-chair of the program's Advisory Council and former JTFGB parent.

"Giving back in one way or another has always been an important part of my Jewish identity, but I never fully felt like I was making an actual difference with that until I participated in JTFGB," said Sophie Goodman, a junior from Newton. "This program empowered me to work with other Jewish teens from all over the community as we incorporated our Jewish values into the world of philanthropy. As a group, we were able to raise enough money that we could actually see that change that we were actively making."

In May 2019, JTFGB Director Leah Goldstein received the Hebrew College Esther Award for Leadership & Philanthropy for her work with the program at Hebrew College's annual spring fundraiser.

EMPOWERING JEWISH COMMUNITY

Hebrew College 2014 alumni Rabbi Avi Killip and Rabbi Becky Silverstein were named to the fifth cohort of Schusterman fellows, a highly-selective and diverse group of Jewish leaders from around the country who are transforming organizations, leading movements, and driving change in the Jewish world and beyond. The two, who were chevruta partners at Hebrew College, are spending 18 months together in the prestigious Schusterman professional development program.

"It feels especially meaningful to be starting this fellowship with Rabbi Silverstein five years after ordination," said Rabbi Killip, the founder of Beyn Kodesh L'chol in Jamaica Plain, MA. "Learning Torah in chevruta creates a more vibrant experience of the Torah, and doing leadership development in pairs or in community provides something very similar," said Rabbi Silverstein. "Being with folks who think differently and will challenge me is important to help me shape a clearer sense of how I can make an impact."

TEACHING LAW IN A PLURALISTIC SPACE

Hebrew College President Rabbi Sharon Cohen Anisfeld, Rabbinical School Associate Dean Rabbi Jane Kanarek, and Rabbi Ayalon Eliach, Rab`18 spoke at Harvard Law School in December about the challenges and rewards of teaching and learning halakhah in a pluralistic school. Their remarks were part of a keynote address at the “Progressive Halakhah Conference” which brought thinkers from across the Jewish legal landscape to examine the evergreen debate about the evolution of halakhah. Rabbi Anisfeld said the study of halakhah is part of a larger ongoing discussion among faculty and students about the vital questions of rabbinic education and rabbinic formation: What does a rabbi need to know? And who does a rabbi need to be?

“What we seek to do is help our students learn to speak the language of — and thus enter into the ongoing, unfolding process of — Jewish decision-making,” she said. “It matters less that we come to the same answers regarding practice — than that we are asking the same questions, in a language that allows us to stay in faithful conversation — which means to stay in relationship.”

“Me’ah gave me the foundation to integrate traditional faith and modernity. To understand the challenges and complexity of our books, our people and our land. To understand the perseverance of Jewish thought and community affected by the ebb and flow of tolerance and intolerance, destruction and survival.”

“When Rabbinical School Dean Rabbi Dan Judson suggested contributing to the student scholarship fund as a possible class gift, the 2018 class decided to spearhead a crowdfunding campaign that raised over $30,000 from more than 220 people to support future students at Hebrew College. The Jewish world needs the kind of clergy Hebrew College helps form, and financial concerns should not prevent someone from pursuing their education here.”

“Rachel Adelman gives a new way of looking at and interpreting old texts. She introduces readings, paintings and poetry (some her own) which highlight the topic at hand. In our most recent course "Nexus Between Homeland and Exile" we learned that Serah, Asher's daughter knew that Joseph's bones were in a metal casket in the middle of the Nile! Who knew!? Every class is enlightening and truly an adventure in Biblical study!"
