AWARD RECIPIENTS

BETZALEL AWARD: HONORING LEADERSHIP IN ARTS AND CULTURE

Joshua Meyer

For his beautiful and evocative body of work, his efforts as an art educator, and his contribution to the world of Jewish art.

Joshua Meyer is a painter whose artistic practice is deeply intertwined with Jewish tradition and communal life. "Judaism and art have this thing in common where they're all-encompassing," says Meyer. Based in Cambridge, Meyer has spent decades exploring how art-making, like Judaism, rejects fixed answers in favor of process, debate, and transformation. He is a valuable member of the Hebrew College Arts Committee, and his first major exhibition at Hebrew College, Tohu vaVohu, drew on the opening verses of Bereishit, taking the biblical image of primordial chaos resolving into creation as a metaphor for the artistic process across a cycle of 40 paintings. Meyer's work is not always explicitly Jewish in imagery, yet it is structured by themes that emanate from Jewish life, including pluralism, argument, attention to time, and the belief that meaning emerges through encounter and relationship. He is represented by Rice Polak Gallery in Provincetown and Dolby Chadwick Gallery in San Francisco and has exhibited widely, including at Yale, NYU, UCLA, the BYU Museum of Art, the Worcester Art Museum and Boston's Museum of Fine Arts.

ESTHER AWARD: HONORING COURAGEOUS WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP

Terry Rosenberg

For her long record contributing to the health and thriving of Jewish institutions as a consultant, trustee, and change agent.

Terry Rosenberg has dedicated her career to learning, growth, and nurturing the values of Torah in individuals and communities. As a consultant and coach, she has guided senior executives, Jewish communal leaders, and rabbis. In Boston, she has been a devoted volunteer and community leader, helping to seed Hebrew College's Me'ah adult learning program at her synagogue, and serving on the boards of local and national organizations close to her heart. Her focus has long been adult Jewish learning and contemplative practice, fostered through her work with CJP, Synagogue 2000, Hebrew College, and the Institute for Jewish Spirituality. In 2017, Terry became a certified spiritual director through HUC-JIR, blending her professional experience with her personal commitment to spiritual growth. She serves on the board of the Jewish Women's Archive, the Institute for Jewish Spirituality's Wisdom Council, the Jewish Grandparents Network Advisory Council, and Hebrew College's Strategic Planning Committee.

L'DOR VADOR AWARD: HONORING INTERGENERATIONAL LEARNING AND LEADERSHIP

Helene, Seth, and Benjamin Gelber

For their multigenerational commitment to advancing the work of tikkun olam through their labor, volunteering, and generosity.

For more than two decades, the Gelber family has helped shape and strengthen the Jewish community of Greater Boston. Arriving as a young couple without local ties, Helene and Seth found their foothold in Jewish Boston through Helene's employment at Combined Jewish Philanthropies. From congregational life to volunteer service and board leadership, their involvement grew into a sustained commitment to Jewish life. Enrolling their son, Ben, at The Rashi School deepened their connection to Jewish culture, tradition and the State of Israel. In high school Ben served as a youth trustee on the board of Jewish Family Service of Metrowest. Last year, he authored and self-published a children's picture book set during Passover that raises food allergy awareness, turning its sales into a fundraiser for FASI: The Food Allergy Science Initiative. For the Gelbers, Jewish education is both a personal and philanthropic priority. They invest not only financially, but also through leadership, volunteering, and advocacy to strengthen Boston's Jewish community.

with the Esther Award: honoring courageous women's leadership

Thank you for all you do to foster Jewish life and make the world a better place.

May you go from strength to strength.

In Jewish literature, particularly in Kabbalah, the “divine spark” (nitzotz) is a fragment of holy light embedded within all creation, representing the spiritual essence of every object, person, and phenomenon.

Originating from Isaac Luria’s teachings, these sacred sparks were scattered during the “breaking of the vessels” (shevirat ha-kelim) and must be elevated and reunited with the Divine through righteous action — My Jewish Learning

*To Hebrew College professional and lay leadership,
And to our dedicated students,
Thank you for your divine light that sparks sacred purpose,*

There are people and families whose commitment to Jewish life is not a chapter in their biography — it is the biography itself.

We are privileged to celebrate three such honorees:
the Gelber family, Joshua Meyer, and Terry Rosenberg.

You have each walked a distinct path yet arrived at the same place — at the heart of a community sustained by learning, creativity, and courage.

With great gratitude, admiration and love,

Susan and Bob Schechter

To our inspiring award recipients,
Joshua Meyer, Terry Rosenberg, and the Gelber Family:

We are honored and overjoyed to honor each of you.

Thank you for illuminating our world with sacred sparks—

Of learning and creativity
Of devotion and imagination
Of humility and loving leadership.

Our community is stronger, wiser, more vibrant, more beautiful, and more whole because of you.

You give us hope.

With deep gratitude and kavod,
Sharon and Shimi Cohen Anisfeld

Helene, Seth, and Benjamin Gelber (L'dor Vador Award)

At Hebrew College, this sacred work continues in every generation.

We are so proud of this year's honorees. Through teaching, living, giving, and leading, they remind us that Judaism is not only something we inherit — it is something we nurture, deepen, and lovingly pass forward.

The wisdom we received from those who came before us becomes meaningful when we carry it onward: to our children, our grandchildren, and our community. In that passing down, Judaism remains alive — growing, adapting, and taking root anew in every generation.

May we continue to plant seeds of learning, faith, and commitment for those who will come after us.

With gratitude and admiration,
